DHBA Mourns the Loss of a Tireless Leader

The Hispanic community lost one of its finest advocates on Saturday with the passing of Adelfa Botello Callejo. Callejo was one of the founding members of the predecessor organization to the Dallas Hispanic Bar Association (DHBA), the Mexican American Bar Association in Dallas. Callejo was a kind, generous soul who was always willing to give her support to individuals in need. But her legacy is much greater than that. She advocated tirelessly for changes intended to give Hispanics the tools needed to lift ourselves up and succeed. She laid the foundation for many of us to achieve, and we mourn the loss of a leader, a mentor, and a role model.

DHBA Mourns the Loss of a Tireless Leader

The DHBA was honored to present Callejo with its “La Luz” award in 2010, an award given to those who are trailblazers in lighting the path for Hispanics in the legal profession.

The DHBA supports an organization founded by her, Partners Against Crime and Drugs, by helping sponsor families every holiday season. She has left us now, but each of us can honor her every day by remembering and embodying the values for which she stood.

Her tireless efforts have laid the foundation for us to continue our mission in her absence. Rest in peace, Adelfa Callejo.

DHBA's Mission

The DHBA “provides a forum through which Hispanic attorneys in the Dallas-Fort Worth Metroplex (“DFW Metroplex”) can come together to exchange ideas and to pursue common goals. The purpose of the Association is to promote the social, economic, educational, and civic advancement of the DFW Metroplex Hispanic community by making the legal system more accessible to the Hispanic community and more responsive to its needs.”
